The world Proton Therapy market size in 2012 is valued at US$ 440 million and is expected to grow by more than 30% in 2013. This growth is driven by the expected opening of 13 new particle therapy facilities in 5 countries for a total of 32 treatment rooms. 2013 will be the first year in the history of particle therapy to see so many new centers opening their doors. In comparison, the year 2012 saw only two facilities starting to treat patients for a total of eight treatment rooms.

Proton therapy remains a niche market however it is just coming up and growing fast. It has been subject to substantial interests in the past decade and it is expected that there will be a significant growth in proton treatment facilities around the world in the foreseeable future.
